DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Applicant's amendment of claims 14-17, and 19 is acknowledged and has been entered.
2. Applicant's addition of claims 21-31 is acknowledged and has been entered.
3. Claims 14-17, 19, 21-31 are currently pending.

Rejections Withdrawn

4. Applicant's arguments, see pgs. 6-7, filed August 9, 2004, with respect to the rejections under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection of claims 14-17, 19, under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, has been withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

5. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

6. Claims 14-17, 19, 21-22, 26-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by Gasman et al [Gasman et al, Identification of a potential effector pathway for the trimeric G_o protein associated with secretory granules, 1998, J Bio Chem, 273(27), p.16913-16920]. Gasman et al teach the observation of intracellular localization of Rho in chromaffin cells (p.16913, col.1) and that Rho, along with trimeric G proteins have been associated with exocytosis (column 16913, col.2). Gasman et al further teach chromaffin cells grown on fibronectin coated glass coverslips and fixed for 15 minutes in 4% paraformaldehyde where immunofluorescence staining was monitored with a Zeiss laser scanning microscope (p.16914, col.2). To investigate the intracellular distribution of Rho in chromaffin cells, the exoenzyme C3 of C.botulinum was used (p.16915, cols.1-2). The intracellular distribution of RhoA in cultured chromaffin cells was examined by immunofluorescence and confocal microscopy (p.16916, col.1). Further studies involved studying the effect of mastoparan and GAP-43 on the secretory granule associated phosphatidylinositol 4-kinase activity (p.16916, cols.1-2). Gasman et al teach that mastoparan strongly stimulated the formation of radiolabeled PtdInsP in purified chromaffin granule membranes. This activity was not significantly affected by LY294002 but was largely inhibited by quercetin (p.16916, col.2, fig. 4B). Gasman et al further teach that mastoparan has been reported to activate G_i and G_o proteins, and that the effect of mastoparan is completely abolished by anti- $G_{\alpha o}$ antibodies (p.16917, col.1).

Response to Arguments

7. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 14-17, 19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Allowable Subject Matter

8. Claims 23-25 are allowed.

9. Claims 23-25 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

10. The following references are also cited as art of interest: Hayashida et al [Hayashida et al, Intracellular third loop domain of angiotensin II type 2 receptor: role in mediating signal transduction and cellular function, 1996, J Bio Chem, 271(36), 21985-21992] studies the effects of pertussis toxin and sodium orthovanadate on the antagonistic effect of AT2-3LP on mitogen-activated protein kinase activity.
